

3.11 Recognition by the international R&D&I community

Involvement in the international science and research community means long-term contacts with foreign partners and their involvement in FIS creative activities. This is done with long-term commitment for example in the form of regular cooperation with the University in Bratislava, the Technical University of Košice, Matej Bel University in Banská Bystrica. In addition to our closest neighbours, such long-term cooperation has been established with the University of Maribor (Slovenia), the Fraunhofer Institute (Germany), the Technical University Wien (Austria), the University of Regensburg (Germany), Johannes Kepler University Linz (Austria), the University of Economics in Wrocław (Poland) and many others. Since 2017, cooperation continues to evolve with the University of California, Berkeley (USA).

More detailed references can be found in FIS annual reports.